Virginia Emergency Response Team (VERT)

2012-10 Hurricane Sandy
Situation Report #2
October 27 0800 hours

SUMMARY

The Virginia Emergency Operations Center (VEOC) is at Response Operations, Hurricane Readiness Condition 3 monitoring National Hurricane Center and National Weather Service products related to Hurricane Sandy which has been downgraded to a Tropical Storm. Additional weakening may occur today, but re-strengthening is likely beginning 2100 Sunday, 28 October.

EXECUTIVE ACTION

Governor Bob McDonnell declared a State of Emergency at 0950 hours on 26 October due to the anticipation of severe weather impacting the Commonwealth as a result of Hurricane Sandy. Governor McDonnell will be holding a Media Briefing at 1300 hours today.

Weather Forecast

Tropical Storm Sandy continues on a northward track from off the coast of northern Florida this morning. Overall, little has changed from yesterday. Some uncertainty remains in the forecast track of Sandy (and the eventual dangerous nor'easter the storm is forecast to become), there is growing confidence that coastal Virginia will feel significant impacts, particularly along the coast and bay.

Moderate to possible severe tidal flooding is likely across Hampton Roads Sunday into Monday morning.

Wind directions will shift from northeast today and Sunday to north/northwest on Monday. Norfolk and Virginia Beach and the eastern shore counties of Northampton and Accomack are under a high wind watch Sunday into Monday for sustained winds of 35 to 45 mph and wind gusts to 60 mph. In general, winds will be less severe farther inland, with gusts to 40 to 45 mph expected across much of the Interstate 95 corridor including Richmond, with 35-40 mph gusts west of this region.

The heaviest rainfall is expected tonight, Sunday, and Sunday night, with highest amounts over eastern Virginia near the Bay and the coast (these areas are under a Flood Watch).
